NAME

HOUSE OF ASHKAR

SYMBOL

ALLIES & ORGANIZATIONS

0 — The Name Given Before the Burden

Varesh Ashkar was born into House Ashkar, a respected Sunspear family known for generations of military service and leadership within the Order. As a Kalashtar, she experienced vivid dreams from childhood, seeing fragments of memories and visions that were not entirely her own. Two figures appeared repeatedly: Kormir, who embodied sacrifice, wisdom, and hope, and Varesh Ossa, whose story served as a warning against pride and corruption. Her father, Karim Ashkar, intentionally gave her the name Varesh, believing that a troubled legacy could be redeemed through honourable deeds. While he saw the name as a challenge to overcome, Varesh grew up fearing it was a destiny she might one day fulfill.

1 — The Ashkar Household (a house from the city of Vabbi)

"A family of scholars who chose the spear over the pen." Varesh was raised between two opposing philosophies of the Sunspear ideal. Her mother, Nadijeh, taught that strength existed to protect others through compassion and mercy, while her father, Karim, believed that duty sometimes demanded harsh decisions to prevent greater suffering. Although Karim remained a respected Sunspear commander, his increasingly rigid interpretation of discipline created a demanding and emotionally difficult household. Varesh accepted these teachings as necessary sacrifices, believing that enduring hardship was simply part of becoming worthy of the Sunspear Order. Her older sister, Samira, gradually came to reject their father's worldview.

2 — The Night Samira Left

Unable to reconcile her father's uncompromising beliefs with the ideals she believed the Sunspears represented, Samira decided to flee the family and begin a new life. Karim confronted her as she attempted to leave the village, and their disagreement escalated into violence. Samira escaped into the desert, but not before Karim wounded her with his spear, leaving a permanent scar across her left arm. Varesh secretly witnessed the entire confrontation, becoming one of only two people who knew that her sister had survived.

3 — The First Secret

The following morning, Karim announced that Samira had been killed by wolves during the night, presenting a bloodstained garment as evidence. His reputation within the Sunspears ensured that the story was accepted without question. Varesh knew the truth but remained silent, believing that exposing her father would destroy both her family and their standing within the Order. This became the first defining secret of her life and established a pattern that would later repeat itself: choosing loyalty and responsibility over complete honesty.

4 — The Perfect Sunspear

Determined to restore honour to the Ashkar name, Varesh devoted herself entirely to the Sunspears. She earned a reputation as an exceptional Paragon, admired for balancing discipline with genuine compassion. She consistently advocated for mercy, treated prisoners with dignity, and remained deeply committed to protecting ordinary people rather than seeking personal glory. Regarded as one of the Order's brightest future leaders, Varesh became a symbol of the ideals the Sunspears aspired to uphold, though she sought only to be worthy of carrying the spear rather than holding high office.

CHARACTER BACKSTORY

Names and Titles

Because of the weight the name Varesh carries, many of the older Sunspears avoid speaking it directly. Instead, they affectionately call her "Spearling." It began when she was a young recruit who was always found polishing her training spear after everyone else had gone home. The name stayed into adulthood, though only those who have known her for years still use it. Senior officers usually address her simply as Ashkar, following Sunspear custom. Close friends sometimes shorten it to Vae. Only her mother ever called her "Little Sun." Her father always used her full name.

Insults

Ossa — the most cutting insult, reducing her to the memory of Varesh Ossa.
Prophet's Daughter — implying she is destined to betray Elona.
The Second Varesh — whispered much later in the story.
False Spear — used after rumours of the Bloodstone spread.
Abaddon's Paragon — a title she fears more than death.

Habits

- When travelling with companions, she unconsciously counts everyone every few minutes.
- She instinctively stands closest to the door in any room. Old Sunspear habit.
- Collects tea whenever she travels, love reading with some tea.
- Hords broken spearhead
- cleans everyone's equipment in the camp when she is stressed
- before sleeping she always sharpens her spear
- collects small pieces of coloured glass
- Overly polite to enemies, sometimes want to be friends
- writes overly formal letters to friends and secretly loves gossip
- she keeps every gift she receives
- names all her weapons and spear heads, like trophies

Hobbies

1. Calligraphy
Her greatest hobby. She learned traditional Elonian calligraphy from her mother. She believes beautiful handwriting reflects disciplined thought. She writes every journal by hand, even battle reports.

She enjoys copying:
- ancient Sunspear oaths
- poems
- old Vabbian manuscripts
- philosophical passages

2. Drawing
- ruined temples
- desert flowers
- spearheads
- birds in flight
- old Sunspear banners
- geometric Vabbian architecture

3. Books
- art of war
- the scrolls of kormir
- the histories of Vabbi

2. Music
Favourite song: tarnimat janayizia (funeral hymn)
Her mother used to hum it while braiding her hair.
After Samira disappeared...
Nadijeh never sang it again.
Favourite play: "The Last King of Fahrnanur" - Vabbian tragedy

Food
- honey dates
- lamb with cinnamon
- flatbread
- mint tea
- pomegranates
dislikes: goat's milk

Animals
- loves the falcon
Friends
- Captain Idris
- Liyana
- Brother Nazeem
- Jaleh ibn Rashad

Childhood crush
- Marshal Cassian Jaleel
